Return to Play Policy

When a player is injured on the ice a Hockey Canada Injury Report must be filled out by the trainer of the team and the parents of the player. The parents must also fill out a Beverly Minor Hockey Return to Play form signed by their Doctor, these forms must be handed in to the Convenor before the player is allowed to get back on the ice.

If a player has sustained an injury (on or off the ice) and has had to seek medical attention the parents must give to their trainer the Hockey Canada Injury Report Form (if the injury was hockey related) and/or the Return to Play Form which must be signed by a Doctor before the player is allowed to return to play. The Trainer must ensure this is handed in to the Convenor.

The player must be able to participate fully in at least one practice before being allowed to return to game play, if the Trainer is satisfied with the player's abilities then the player may resume game play.

Rationale:

The importance of completing the Hockey Canada Injury report form is to protect the player and their family if they do need to claim insurance from Hockey Canada. The Return to Play form is an important step in ensuring that the player has indeed been given approval from their Doctor to resume playing Hockey which is a contact sport.
